LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT

Friends and partners,

It's been another wonderful year at sanctuary for 300 former research chimps thanks to your partnership and generous support.

We were thrilled to once again welcome new chimps to the sanctuary with three sweet newbies joining us from a research facility in Texas. Merlin, Hilde, and Penny wasted no time settling in and warmed our hearts with their awe-struck reactions when they moved into a living space with grass and open skies. We're so thankful to have them home and hope to be able to welcome more chimps – including those who remain at the Alamogordo Primate Facility in New Mexico – in the future.

As newcomers arrived, our team continued its focus on Chimp Haven's oldies. With more than half the colony considered geriatric, we're hard at work preparing for their changing care needs as they age, increasing veterinary capabilities, retrofitting living spaces, and managing personalized care plans to ensure they continue to thrive in their golden years. Meanwhile, the sanctuary's recall program caught the attention of national audiences as The New York Times showcased the unique training protocols Chimp Haven has developed to keep the chimps safe during weather emergencies. The team has added a fun twist as they create unique audio cues for each chimp family – when Pepi's group hears, "Listen to the Music," by the Doobie Brothers, they know it's time to head inside!

As we look forward and prepare for the chimps' future, we always take time to appreciate the unforgettable moments you create for them at sanctuary every day. Our resident youngster, Carlee, continues to grow into a young adolescent, while our oldies thrive and show us what retirement is all about. New bonds form over a game of chase, and friendships deepen with a shared nap in the sunshine.

This remarkable life they live is all possible because of your friendship and support. From all of us at Chimp Haven, thank you for making these special moments possible and for giving them the retirement they deserve.

With gratitude,

Rana E. Smith

Handsome, but nosy Bart loves spying on the neighbors.

Bold lady Cassie and her groupmates moved into a multi-acre forested habitat for the first time, and even surprised their caregivers by taking to the trees.

As Mason transitioned from adolescent to adult, he settled in as the alpha of his large social group.

Newcomer Merlin couldn't believe his eyes when he and his groupmates moved into a corral with big, open skies above and grass below.

The Chimp Haven recall program got its moment in the spotlight when it was featured in The New York Times this year.

Smart, beautiful adolescent Arden spent her summer doing what she loves best: climbing trees.

Zort takes a break on the structure in his play yard which was retrofitted to be more easily accessible for geriatric and mobility-challenged chimps.

Taffy, Queenie B, and the rest of their tough "girl gang" enjoy a sunrise grooming session.
